Dr. Curry told the committee that the percent of positions filled by students from University of Illinois College of Medicine campuses fell slightly, which is being investigated. Dr. Curry acknowledged the efforts of the Office of International Services in assisting its student throughout the year, and he referred to complicated issues related to immigration and visas faced by its students. He said that Graduate Medical Education is a joint effort between the College of Medicine and UI Health, and he acknowledged support from UI Health that is essential to the program’s success.
